Italian-Americans and Religion: An Annotated Bibliography

Silvano M. Tomasi and Edward C. Stibili

As a first step in presenting an organized and easily accessible index on sources and printed material in a major area in the life of Italian Americans (religion) and on a major ethnic group in the life of American Catholicism, this annotated bibliography initiates a systematic gathering of references, archives, published materials on both the missionary action started from Italy toward the North American continent and the Catholic and Protestant experiences of the immigrants from Italy beginning with the period of mass immigration and moving into the present.

Silvano M. Tomasi is the President of the Center for Migration Studies of New York and the author of several articles and books on the Italian experience in the U.S. and on ethnic workers. Since 1965 he has been the editor of the scientific quarterly International Migration Review. His book Piety and Power was the 1975 winner of the Catholic Historical Association's Second Annual Howard R. Marraro Prize.

Edward C. Stibili received his Ph.D. in American history at the University of Notre Dame in 1977. He has taught history at St. Norbert College since 1967.
